

Japan is advanced in many different fields. For example, development of the auto industry, progress of the medical treatment and so on. Japan has advanced technical skills. This is a strong point of my country. However, there is no point in having the technology if we don't have the materials to put them to use. What becomes necessary then is cooperation from the other Asian countries.

There are many countries in Asia that have rich resources. The relationship where we import the materials from Asia, make them into products with technology, and export them will continue in the future. I think such a relation is very productive and important because it causes profit each other. But we mustn't forget to exist some problem. We should give the environmental problem more careful consideration in particular. Rapid development of Asian countries involves deforestation to land exploitation. As Japan is also a country which has triggered various environmental problems, they should remember it as a lesson for the Asian countries and have to support Asia, otherwise we lost precious supplier of resources. Given these facts, my country's roles are "advance and support". Japan should not only advance of Japanese company into foreign, but also assist for progress of other countries.

I believe Asia will be a leader of the world in the future. They always confront with great difficulties during the process. It's time like that Japan and Asia should cooperate. To do so, we need to build a firm relationship from now.