

The role of my country and Asia in the future 5B10 Yoshie Kaneko

The role of Japan in the international community in the future is telling the world about the importance of the abolition of nuclear weapons, and to help developing countries develop economic advances using its state-of-the-art technologies. Japan is the only exposed country in the war and thus experienced the utter defeat. Nevertheless Japan recovered from the shock of defeat rapidly and became one of the world economic powers. I think Japan is the only one that can force to abolish nuclear weapons from all over the world, because Japan knows the horrors of the atom bomb the best. The number of people who attended the Atomic Bomb Dome is increasing year by year. However there are 5 countries accepted possession of nuclear by NPT such as the U.S and China. Also we have a responsibility to success nuclear abolition as the only country that has suffered from atomic bombing.

Japan has prominent technologies. Japan is famous for the car industry and electronics. A lot of electrical appliances made in Japan occupy large share in the global market. There are a lot of international large-scale corporation in Japan. The population of Japan is much smaller than that of China, and the GDP of Japan is much smaller than that of America too. Japan can't export agricultural products, a large Japan can't do a enough agriculture because of Japan is small. In addition Japan doesn't have natural resources as a result Japan can't export natural resources. According to those, the contribution to the world that can Japan is to invent state-of-the-art technologies and export those. Providing technologies will lead to growing other countries. Especially that is an important things for developing countries.

ASEASN and Japan have been building cooperation for Asian peace, stability, development and prosperity for more than thirty years. Asian countries such as those and China and Korea are growing amazing economic progress, and making their presence felt more strongly in the world. The population of ASIAN is well above that of EU or NAFTA, and China is ranked second in the world as a GDP and Japan is third, so the role of Asia in the future is changing the world lining up shoulder with the United States.
