The role of a country is different in when it is, where the country is stated, and what the country is good at, I think. Japan, my mother country has been taking the leading part of Asia, and has been good at the industries such as car company like Toyota. However as the ASEAN has been developing so much which made Asia great economic growth. So from now on, what is the role of Japan in Asia?

My first idea of future role of Japan is to become a country that accepts immigrants. This has an advantage for Asia. It is that this future plan can reduce the unemployment rate in some countries like Mongolia. More people to work in Asia makes whole Asian economy better, and so this relates to great development in Asia.

Also it has an advantage for Japan in foreign languages. For example companies in Japan wants people who are able to speak foreign language not only English. Therefore accepting immigrants might make lots of good things for economies in Japan. However, there are some points we have to be careful. One is to make an environment for foreign people to work, and two is the people coming into Japan should have ability of languages at least they can work in Japan normally. Otherwise, Japan has to pay much more public assistance if the people who can't communicate and work in Japan stays long as it is happening in Germany. Also it is much hard for Japanese economy to pay more public assistance as it is already suffering from the disasters such as earthquake.

My second idea for the role of Japan in the future is to keep being the leading part of Asia and the world by the thing which Japan has advantages of.

One is the technical aspects such as electric devices, appliances and computers. The companies, for example, Sony, Toshiba and Mitsubishi have been producing smartphones, fridge and TV etc. and the quality of those products made in Japan was rated very high. Producing these products has been the good role of Japan, to help the development of Asia. Also the place where the electric devices like smartphone was established in Japan, but mostly made in the countries in the southeast Asia, which means cooperation makes Asia to grow and to be revitalised.

Two is the manufacture, such as car industry. Japan has been famous for the car manufacture for a long time, and liked by a lot of people in the world. Japan is a country of many exports of car, maybe one of the best. The company called "Daihatsu" is one of the oldest car company. It has produced some different varieties of car, which made suitable for everyone, and it still exists. Now a days, hybrid cars and electric cars are started to be produced to prevent the global warming. Car is a great way of transportation which we still need very much, and the car company and industry to produces these modern featured cars are necessary to be there, of course.

As the ASEAN and other countries in Japan have developed so much and cooperation of Asia is brilliant, I think giving the advantages of each country could make a big network in Asia, which can stabilise long, and succeed in the world.

In conclusion, I think Japan should allow more immigrants not only to help the other countries, but to help Japanese companies who need workers of speaker of other language, and try to keep going where Japan has advantage of. I can now surely say cooperation of Asia will success and sustainable for a long term in the whole world.
